

Scene near Gran Sabana, Venezuela, February 12, 1989. A naturally occurring fire during the 1930s drove conversion of this landscape from tropical rain forest into grass savanna. Nutrient-poor soils and changes in seasonal rainfall patterns have prevented forest regrowth. (Photograph by Reiner Zimmermann.)