

Caribou grazing on Alaska's North Slope near the boreal forest-tundra boundary on May 7, 2004. The boreal environment revolves around cold winters and brief summers. Life cycles of animals in this environment are well adapted to these harsh conditions. (Photograph by Ted Hogg.)