

Ground-truth validation of satellite-based tide predictions. A tidal prediction (blue curve), based on analysis of TOPEX/Poseidon satellite altimeter data collected in the vicinity of Ascension Island, in the middle Atlantic Ocean, is found to compare well with actual hourly water level measurements made at the island (red circles.) (Hourly data courtesy Proudman Oceanographic Laboratory, UK.)